Some of the Senatorial or court party of our state have fuggested that our "selfereated body of fenators, had they been fully certified it was the with of the majority of the people, would, the last session of legislature, have passed the bill for the purpose of taking the sense of the people on the propriety of cashing a Convention or control of the people on the propriety of cashing a Convention.—To which, by the by, I fearcely sean pay the least credit.—For men are not very fond of laying down that power, which, should a Convention be effected, it is more than probable they never can re-obtain, and the probable they never can re-obtain. probable they never can re-obtain.

But, however, the next fellion let them have no fuch fubterfuge. det them have no fuch fubteringe, —in each county in our flate, cannot we, who ardently defire the errors and evil tendencies of our Confliction to be corrected; most humbly petition our legislature to anake us a law for the most defirable purpose of calling a Convention to establish a fystem of government on true republicaa principles.?

ment on true republican principles.!

In the course of two years last, so many able-pens have so amply lung, out to open view the rotten and Aristocratical parts of our Conditionion; so that little more can be faid on this topic but what might justly be deemed mere repetition—I herefore I heed not point out the mischiefs which will naturally and inevitably result from the exceedingly blending and consounding the three departments in government which ought to be entirely separate and distinct from wernment which ought to be entirely feparate and diffinct from "The epithet felf-created body of fenarors may perhaps, be offenfive to fome of the fenatorial capaccities; therefore let us with fone degree of precision examine the grounds of this appellation.—It annut be granted to the thort space of one year only, after they are elected, the whole body of fenators, by deaths, disqualifications or otherwise might be possibly extinct.

—In this critical fituation of a stairs what must be done? Shall a fresh set of electors be chosen to elect femators? Here is mysterious conlituational darkness all.—By the constitutional darkness all.—By the constitutional darkness all.—By the constitutional darkness all.—By the constitution in oproviden winatever is made for this case—This case, 'is to be hoped, will but teldom occur.—And, however, we are not deprived of this consolation, should at any time oun senators be reduced to the small number of one or two only; it is almost like the Phoenix, shout he alles of seanter, like a nest egg or two (pardon the simile) they can lay, hatch, create or make as many supple conconsists things to supply the place of senators as ever can possibly the vanted; and that likewise without ever asking the leave of, or consaling the leave of, or consaling the common people about it.—Eave we more than four ortginal senators at this time, or not?

each other, the legislative, judicial and executive.—Which call loudly for reformation.—Neither need i point out the abject, the degraded situation we are in in chusting men to elect the governor and senators for us.—For this is certainly an odious, a dreadful remove of power from the sountain head; implicitly affroming the understanding of a sensible people vigilant of their rights;—conveying the idea that the common people are only sit to choose such that the common people are only sit to choose such that the common people are only sit to choose such that the common people are only sit to choose such that the common people are only sit to choose such that are gions of legislation; very inadequate to select those volatile air-balloon-like genioses calculated only to foar and play their part amid the rarissed atmosphere of the upper regions of legislation.—Beddes are not foar years too long a period for the governor & senators to exercise such exalted powers. The Romen commonwealth sow-rished whilt her bighest magistrates were assurably elected. When that ceased to be the case, I need not inform the enlightened Biltorian what were the tracical events.—Indeed it must be consessed to the such that the sign, the vitals of a Commonwealth to have the bulk of her magistrates and officers civil as well as military, annually and immediately elected by the people—Because their short continuance in office will slimulate them to the atmost to do their duty; it they regard honour or reputation, or even harbour the smallest with ever to be re-elected; and because they then derive their power and receive it directly from the kands of their proper masters the people.

Matilianual elections, never juling force and peculiar genius of pure republicant principles!

CLOCOW, (in Galatia) June 10.

An Auftrian officer is just returned from the frontiers of Poland, where he had been few to fave fome of our boats on the Vittual, loaded with corn, which had near-Joaded with corn, which had nearly fallen a prey to the Rufian ven-geance, miftaking them for the Pol-ith. This officer was almost an eye witness to the battle which hap-pened on the 6th infrant between the combined Rufflan and Pruffian armies, and the Poless It fecus that the intention of the Pollin geenat was to attack the Rufflan corps under Denifon, about eleven thousand frong, befides the Cofack, before their junction with the Prussians, but his plan falled, as on the sifth the Prussians had effected their junction with the Russian army, consisting of near twenty thousand men, commanded by the king in person. The Poles had them on alternative, but to change their planinto a defensive one and expecting to be attacked by an army of far superior force, they prepared to receive him. The position for their army was masterly chosen and all the villages in stank were guarded by small detachments and field pieces. The combined armies began the attack at eight in the morning: the Poles defended themselves with courage without losing an inch of ground, and even the peasants armed with pikes dared to advance within sitteen yards of the Prussians, after repeated attacks, succeeded to drive the Polish detachment, with four field pieces, from a village, where they established immediately a battery, which annoyed so much the stanks of the Polish army, that they gave way and began about three o'clock to retreat, leaving some cannons difmounted. Their retreat was conducted with for much judgment and coolness, that the victorious armies could not take any advantage on their rear, not even make any prisoners, except those who were left wounded on the field of battle. The loss of the Pols may be computed to about 1500, and 12 cannon, besides a few of the shying artillery; some of the guns had Russian arms upon them. BRUSSELS, June 23.

Six in the evening.

The alarm of the inhabitants has not fubfided. All the uobility and persons of property are gone, and the people left to their fate. This circumfiance has made a deep imprefion on the minds of the people, one of whom, as I paffed the Hotel de Ville, exclaimed to his companions, who were liftening to him with great attention:

"I ris thus we are always treated. In the hour of calamity these governors and nobility defert us, and in the period of prosperity they return and riot on the produce

Yeiterday the enemy advanced and fecured the policition of Gemappe. The movement occasioned general alarm.
Towards the evening, however, it was reported that general Latour had fucceeded in driving the enemy from their position at Chappelle Herlaimont and that he had pelle Herlaimont and that he had advanced his posts to Trefignies and Anderlues. This intelligence was not confirmed by any official accounts.

During the night, which few of the alarmed inhabitants paffed in fleep, it was faid that the French had tallen back from Goffelles, and that the prince of Cobourg had arrived at 4th, about nine leagues from Bruffells. The cannonade against Charleroi continued with unabated force.

A proclamation, in the name of his imperial majefty, was this morning iffued by found of trumpets and beat of drums. In this proclamation the inhabitants of Bruffels and the faburbs are invited to affemble, form officers, and be in readines to march at a moment's notice. Hitherto this proclamation has not been agreeded with the defired fuccefs.

The fellowing intelligence contained in a private letter has just been read to the inhabitants.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.
Ancient history afford us many striking instances of patriotic bravery, among which few are more brilliant, than that of Leonidas at the straits of Thermopylae; but even that is fearcely to be compared to the following, which is said to have taken place at Gandaloupe. Before the English landed, the French had sprung a mine, and that they might make a sure destruction of their enemies, a French officer proposed to devote himself. struction of their enemies, a French officer proposed to devote himself to death to ferve his country, and agreed to go over to the English, feign himself a deferter, and lead them on the fatal spot. [From the Independent Gazetteer.]

Mr. Printer,
Being folicited to enter as avolunteer to fuppress the infurgense in the Weftern counties, I beg leave to observe—that I served in the Continental Army from the commencement of hostilities by the King of Great-Britain to the desiries treaty of peace, when I was nitive treaty of peace, when I was honorably discharged and retired to my home, with affurances from my beloved General and the Remy beloved General and the Reprefentatives of my country that I should be paid in specie agreeably to contract the full amount of my stipulated wages.—A few months after a part of my wages was tendered in State notes and a part in sinal settlements; I was rold to take that or nothing.—Necessity compelled me to take it although I was obliged to sell those Certificates to a gentleman, now a member of Congress for 2/in the pound, it being the highest price and more than the speculators in general gave for that species of property. I however expected my country would consider that public engagements had not been fall-silled nor public pulice done,—but to my great mortifications, heard Mr Steel bring sorward a motion on the sloor of Congress, which was agreed by a great majority of the members, that the army had been lavishly paid by the rations they received, and moreover, Certificates for their wages, which if they had fold for too in the pound, it was more than they had earned.

A government capable of every species of violation cannot ensure to itself a second time success is arms, and the members of it a harvest in speculation.—If the President had maintained his shelity to his old army, his order would be sufficient to elect them from every part of the continent; every Officer and Soldier would resume his place, and form a detachment for any emergency whatever;—but now there is a distrust of government for the payment of the Militia, and also of the propriety of the cause.

It is therefore my decided opinion that those gentlemen who reapthe benefit of the late revolution by having become purchasers of Soldier's notes at 2/6 in the pound ought to be enrolled in Military form, and as they claim the revenue arising from the Excile Law, let them covered obedience to it—and not trouble
